IN THE TVET SECTOR, GERMANY’S DEVELOPMENT COOPERATION ...

- helps increase agricultural productivity by providing initial and ongoing training for skilled workers.
- helps to improve health education and to train health sector personnel.
- supports high-quality, labor market-oriented, inclusive TVET for all.
- helps foster gender equality and improve women's job prospects, for instance in the ICT sector.
- helps to improve training in specific water sector occupations.
- helps provide specialized training for the construction and maintenance of renewable energy installations, for example for solarteurs.
- helps improve people’s employability and, thus, their opportunity to benefit from economic development.
- helps to ensure sustainable use of land ecosystems through skills development.
- provides knowledge and innovation for the sustainable use of oceans and marine resources.
- fosters innovation for climate-related and environment-related jobs.
- promotes international rules for occupational health and safety and environmental protection along supply chains.
- helps to train skilled workers for energy-efficient housing construction.
- helps to tackle the root causes of displacement, stabilize host regions and support refugees and IDPs through vocational training.
- helps provide better TVET infrastructure, for instance through the modernization of workshops and training facilities, taking account of digital innovations.
- gives people a chance to earn a steady income.
- gives disadvantaged population groups new opportunities and empowers them.
- fosters innovation for sustainable use of oceans and marine resources.
- promotes international rules for occupational health and safety and environmental protection along supply chains.
- helps to train skilled workers for energy-efficient housing construction.
- helps to tackle the root causes of displacement, stabilize host regions and support refugees and IDPs through vocational training.
- helps provide better TVET infrastructure, for instance through the modernization of workshops and training facilities, taking account of digital innovations.
- gives people a chance to earn a steady income.
- gives disadvantaged population groups new opportunities and empowers them.

The Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development is working with its partner countries to implement the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. TVET has a role in achieving all the goals of the 2030 Agenda.

Development cooperation creates new opportunities.
The Sustainable Development Goals: www.bmz.de/en/sdg