Overview of German international climate finance 2025

Germany's contributions to climate action in figures

bmz.de

International climate finance 2025 (total contribution)

Climate finance total from budget funds and from mobilised public and private funds, e.g. in the form of revolving credit lines for local (development) banks, investment in structured funds and public-private partnerships. This represents Germany's total contribution to international climate finance and thus to the goal set by industrialised countries of providing $100 billion a year for mitigation and adaptation measures in developing countries.

Climate finance from federal budget 2025

In 2025, the German government provided a total of 4.71 billion euros in budget funds, including grant equivalents, for international climate finance. Of this, around 50 per cent went to climate change mitigation projects (2.37 billion euros) and around 50 per cent went to adaptation measures (2.34 billion euros).
