

UNITED NATIONS
INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATION

UNIDO - GERMANY COOPERATION

UNIDO is a specialized agency of the United Nations mandated to address complex development challenges through inclusive and sustainable industrial development (ISID). The Lima Declaration of 2013 renewed the mandate of UNIDO and laid the foundation for Sustainable Development Goal 9 on industry, infrastructure and innovation. The Abu Dhabi Declaration, adopted at the 18th session of the UNIDO General Conference in 2019, reiterated the importance of UNIDO's mandate and highlighted its role, among others, as a platform for private sector cooperation and the Fourth Industrial Revolution.

Since Germany became a Member State of UNIDO in 1985, it has been a strong supporter of UNIDO, contributing to shaping its strategies, policies and agenda, and providing valuable resources to important UNIDO programmes, projects and initiatives.

Between 2015 and 2019 Germany provided USD 11.1 million net voluntary contributions to UNIDO.
As at 31 December 2019 UNIDO is implementing 10 ongoing projects financed by Germany.

COOPERATION HIGHLIGHTS

UNIDO will contribute to the German Special Initiative on Training and Job Creation in Ethiopia and Senegal to transform the countries' economies by strengthening their national agro-industry and related sectors, upgrading local SMEs and improving the efficiency of institutions and instruments to increase employment opportunities. UNIDO's contribution is expected to create around 2,800 jobs (50% women, 60-80% youth) and improve working conditions and income for around 3,200 people.

The Investment and Technology Promotion Office (ITPO) Germany, founded in 2017 and based in Bonn, plays an important role in facilitating the transfer of new green and sustainable technologies made in Germany to developing countries. It provides a platform for identifying, promoting and connecting investors, technology providers and financiers for the implementation of investment projects in developing countries and economies in transition.

UNIDO is responsible for collecting and monitoring several indicators under SDG 9, the UN Industrial Statistics and the Competitive Industrial Performance (CIP). With German support, the Organization has developed knowledge products such as the Industrial Analytics Platform (IAP) and the Enhancing the Quality of Industrial Policies (EQuIP) programme. Both aim to advance evidence-based policy dialogue, institutional capacity building and successful industrial policies and strategy formulation.

Moreover, UNIDO partners with UN Women to develop a programme for the economic empowerment of women in green industries, which involves capacity-building of policymakers and practitioners on the establishment and implementation of policy frameworks that integrate gender and green industrial policies.

Finally, UNIDO and Germany have worked to tackle economic distress and unemployment in post-crisis contexts such as Iraq and Libya. In Iraq more than 2,100 beneficiaries were trained and 25 agro-industrial micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs) revitalized, while in Libya, some 200 beneficiaries are expected to receive entrepreneurship training.
